Weekly Advocacy Alert, January 14: Speak Up For the Arts!

Over the past couple of weeks, we have witnessed the persistent manifestations of white supremacy at our Nation's Capitol, in the Presidential Office, and across our democratic processes. The impact of these actions is consistently and disproportionately felt by Black, Indigenous, and peoples of color, disabled and immigrant people, the LGTQIA+ community, especially Trans people, and communities living in poverty. As we shared in our May Open Letter in Response to the Murders of Black People these impacts are just as pervasive in our arts and cultural communities and the dance field — and it is our responsibility to act to uproot them.

As we continue to navigate these difficult waters, Dance/NYC's focus remains the same: to investigate, identify, and undo the manifestations of white supremacy, ableism, xenophobia, and their interrelated forces of oppression in the dance sector and in doing so contribute to the work of generations of Black, Indigenous, POC, disabled, LGTQIA+ and immigrant organizers who began and continue to lead it.

We will not relent in our mission to ensure that dance can thrive here, in New York City, and that its ecology is just for all who are a part of it.

It is with this resolve that we encourage you to review today's advocacy alert, as it outlines a series of resources and important actions you can take to join our efforts in building a thriving dance ecosystem as we continue to respond to the COVID-19 pandemic and fight for the wellbeing of our sector.
