Dance Iquail (DIQ) is a New York City / Philadelphia based organization founded in 2007 that uses the art of dance as a conduit for combating issues of social injustice. Working in the universal language of movement, DIQ is committed to creating and presenting works that confront the destructive and divisive nature of racism, sexism, violence, drug and alcohol abuse, the needs of the poor, and the importance of family support and unity. These debilitating problems affect all people because they transcend limitations of ethnicity, gender, or social status. Consequently, DIQ's ultimate priority is to reflect those beliefs through its works, and through the diversity of its staff, on and off-stage.
