Looking for an experienced male dancer of Asian descent (East Asian, South Asian, Southeast Asian all welcome) with great core strength to execute short series of semi-improvised dance movements for an experimental short film. This shoot will take place on the morning of Sunday Nov 1, from 9am to 1pm in a location TBD in Bushwick, Brooklyn. You will be performing these movements on the ground/asphalt. There will be a choreographer to guide you, and you must be able to quickly learn and execute choreography. You should be trained in contemporary movement styles, and also a plus to have excellent core strength to possibly execute a forearm stand.

The kinds of movements I'm looking for are inspired by the video clip below of a Michael Clark performance. Please send a short clip of yourself doing an interpretation of these movements.
