Strange Talk initially formed as a bedroom recording project by singer/keyboardist Stephen Docker and producer/DJ/bassist Gerard Sidhu, Melbourne, Australia's Strange Talk eventually evolved into a full band in adding guitarist Gillan Gregory and drummer Travis Constable to the lineup. With an electro-pop sound that has been likened to artists like Passion Pit, Phoenix, and Cut Copy, Strange Talk first came into the public eye in 2010 when they became a featured artist in a competition held by Australia's popular Triple J radio station. They followed up with their debut self-titled EP in April 2011 and later that year rose to number one on Billboard's newly established Uncharted chart thanks to the popularity of their singles "Eskimo Boy" and "Climbing Walls."

Hailing from Sydney, Australia, longtime friends & collaborators Kristian Attard and Serg Dimitrijevic collided at the beginning of 2013 in Los Angeles, forming what would soon become known as Intergalactix – an interstellar combustion of music, space travel and vintage devices.

GERMANS is the musical project from New York City's Julia Kwamya that helps her to explore love, desires, and fears. She wants to laugh about sadness, and cry about happiness. She wants to dance and to be able to express herself, always. Very simply, GERMANS makes moody disco pop songs about breaking up, making up, and feeling good about feeling bad.
