Triskelion Arts is pleased to present the world premiere of Becky Radway Dance Project's new work, A Delicate Madness, this November in the Aldous Theater. Set, metaphorically, over the course of a single night, this ghostly trio investigates the visceral cycle of anger and acceptance. In keeping with the company's goal to create innovative movement and powerful imagery, the evening-length piece is filled with beautifully twisted choreography, striking visuals, and a haunting original score to represent this inner struggle, riding a fine line between fury and insanity. Spanning what is typically an un-seeable journey, the work reflects on the moments we choose to hold in or need to let out, how such feelings affect our physicality and ability to sleep, and how we can become unreasonable without our own knowledge. A Delicate Madness encompasses the fragility of human emotion, our desperate apologies, and learning to trust our own judgment in irrational moments.

Support for the creation of this work provided by a Mertz Gilmore Late Stage Production Stipend, the Triskelion Arts' Space Subsidy Program made possible with support from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, and fiscal sponsorship through The Field.
