Big Dance Theater's latest work, ANTIGONICK, is a "pop-up play under construction" of Anne Carson's one-act, radical-feminist take on Sophocles' Antigone. In Carson's theatrical perspective on Antigone's role as a humanist and antagonist, the intellectual excitement of ANTIGONICK lies in how she loses, why her peaceful resistance matters, and the sobering consequences of the Antigone/Creon face-off.

Each night, ticket holders for the 7pm and 8:30pm shows are welcome to a Dionysian Libation with food and drinks beginning at 7:45pm.
