Innately, we are all the same. There is little that differentiates us in terms of bones and matter and DNA - but there is, always has been, and maybe always will be a yearning for us to be different from one another. While some choose to see differences as positive and contributing to a full and well rounded human society, some choose to bully those who step away from their norms.

An original mixed media work featuring poets, scenes, and dance, this show drives home the importance of human connection and kindness in our charged political climate. We are excited to partner with local schools for a scene writing contest and mentoring program in which the winners' scene will be performed as a part of the show.
