Andrew Eccles

David Gordon is undeniably prolific. A pioneer experimenter of Judson Dance Theater and the Grand Union alongside such artists as Yvonne Rainer, Trisha Brown, Steve Paxton, and Lucinda Childs; Gordon has worked in dance, theater, film, TV, and the written word.

It's only fitting that the next stop for Gordon is a work that reexamines a lifetime of creation. Don't miss "Live Archivography": a live, scripted performance of Gordon's past works that integrates video, projections, dance, and narration, to be premiered this summer at The Kitchen as part of LUMBERYARD in the City.
