SHORE celebrates the places where we meet and merge—land and water, performer and audience, art and community, past, present, and future. A multi-day performance installation, produced and presented in association with Emily Johnson/Catalyst, it is the third part of a trilogy exploring the complex terrain of identity, memory, ancestry, land, and community. Building on these themes, SHORE brings ideas and questions that emerged in Johnson's first two works—the Bessie Award-winning The Thank-you Bar (2011) and the richly layered Niicugni (2013)—out into the world.

SHORE is created in four equal parts: SHORE: Community Action (volunteerism)—a series of community work sessions in the Rockaways and on Governors Island involving the caretaking of land and water and dune restoration; SHORE: Story, a curated reading featuring local authors; SHORE: Performance, a work that combines movement, storytelling; and live music; conceived and choreographed by Emily Johnson, directed by Ain Gordon, and performed by Johnson with dancer/collaborators Aretha Aoki, Krista Langberg, and Julia Bither, vocalist/composer Nona Marie Invie (of Dark Dark Dark), the SHORE Choir, and a large cast of local dancers; and SHORE: Feast, a culminating potluck celebration in which participants share stories and the recipes of the dishes they bring to share.
