FOLK CULTURE AND MEMORY

History and expression are experienced through movement, textiles, clothing, and other modes of representation that intersect with the day-to-day experience. Feelings of Home explores this idea, centering local dancers, textile artists, and game-makers, among others who work to preserve collective memory and history, while exploring the subsequent transformation of their practices by migratory and generational experiences. The exhibition features seven artists and collectives creating art forms embedded in the everyday lives of their respective communities, and exploring the interpretation of tradition as it is transformed by experiences of migration, and by multiple generations born in and outside countries of origin.
