Beaten through with arrhythmia and percussive gesture, Loose Heart traces an inner landscape of longing. By turns solitary and unified, the trio of dancers delve into physical meditations and small, rough acts of violence before arriving at a more balanced peace.

Loose Heart features sound design by composer Elliot Cole, and is performed by Brooklyn-based artists Arianna Dunmire and Julia Galanski (Then She Fell), and Jersey City's Myssi Robinson (Kyle Marshall Choreography, Meagan Woods & Company). Loose Heart is the company's second major work.

Loose Heart is developed with support from the 2017 Choreographers in Residence Program at County Prep High School.
