The Playground NYC allows dancers to experience various choreographic styles and ideas, engage with a new community of dancers, and gather resourceful information and inspiration from the array of choreographers involved. In turn, established choreographers are paid for their creative investigations, are given free space to explore new movement with professional dancers, and are provided with the opportunity to establish relationships with new dancers and fellow choreographers.

His choreographic career was further recognized through the kind support of the Jerome Robbins Foundation's NEW Essential Works Grant (2012), commissioning his first large-scale ballet, "Square None" (2012) with ASFB.
