Jerome Bel

Choreographer Jérôme Bel's Gala, featuring 20 New Yorkers of all abilities from all walks of life, will have its New York premiere March 1 -3 at NYU Skirball. Gala's cast, ranging in age from 8 to 80 years old, is a mix of professional dancers and amateurs dancing on stage for the first time.

There will be a special family-friendly matinee on Saturday, March 3 at 3 pm, for children ages 7 and up; special pre-show activities begin at 2 pm. The matinee is a co-production of NYU Skirball's Serious Fun Family Matinee series and the third annual Tilt Kids Festival, an arts festival for families presented by the Cultural Services of the French Embassy and the French Institute Alliance Française (FIAP).

Through their movement, the gentle humanity of each performer lights up this inspired production. Breaking the sanctity of the stage, this is a jumble of joys, failures, and stumbling insights into the uniting power of dance.

Jérôme Bel, the "mischievously entertaining" (The Guardian) Paris-based choreographer, explores the relationship between choreography and popular culture, dancer and audience, often using humor to break the formality of a theater apparatus. Bel's work has often been referred to as conceptual. He questions both art and contemporary dance by deconstructing modes of presentation and the notion of authorship while problematizing the historical prominence of technical virtuosity in dance. Disabled Theater, featuring non-traditional performers (amateurs, people with physical and mental handicaps, children...), was presented in NYC as part of the 2013 Performa Festival. His works have been seen at international contemporary art biennials and museums, including the Tate Modern, MoMA and the Louvre. Bel received a Bessie Award his 2005 work, The Show Must Go On. jeromebel.fr
