Open Practice is a 7-day public performance/installation experimenting with presence, process, intention and manifestation as modes of operation. The artist will facilitate the conception and construction of the space through seven days of real time actions between the artist and the public. The artist and the public are the central components to this process of transforming the 1500+ sq ft gallery/art space from a space of neutrality to a active ritual/performance space itself. The artist will prescribe a specific task of the day on the gallery wall which reflects the Shapist core principles and means of production.
