"Enough" delves into the dark side of consumer culture, focusing on what happens when people are both driven and defined by the perpetual need to possess things. This gritty, risk-taking physical dance-theatre piece pushes this desire to the extreme and examines the point at which an obsession with stealing emerges. We explore the moral conflict that exists within consumerism and probes the most basic of human instincts. "Enough" integrates sinuous, full-bodied movement with intricate gestures to create an alien, yet relatable parable about individualism, identity, survival, and community. The premiere of this performance will be presented with an original composition by Banabila.
