Tomoe Carr was born in Manhattan, New York, NY, but she grew up in Japan for 10years. She started her dance training in Japan at Next Generation Dance Studio under the tutelage of Cebo, learning styles such as Hip Hop, House, Waacking, Locking, Popping, and Breaking. Tomoe is also the first graduate of the street dance program KiNEXtionS™ from Next Generation New York Studios Japan. After returning to New York in 2014 she has expanded her dance vocabulary studying Ballet and Modern at Peridance Capezio Center. Tomoe is currently building her portfolio by working with accomplished professionals such as Tweet Boogie, Michele Byrd-McPhee to name a few. She has also had the opportunities of working with upcoming artists such as Meg Donnelly on Disney's "Next Big Thing" and Jidenna's music video "Tribe" as a featured dancer. Tomoe is also on the teaching staff for EXPG by LDH, and a teacher assistant for Dance Wave. Currently teaches children from ages 5+ and subs beginners Hip Hop and House. She graduated High Tech High School last year and is currently enrolled in college as a Business Management major at New Jersey City University. In the Litefeet dance scene, she has been training under the pioneer dancer Daniel Hollaway also known as Chrybaby Cozie. As of last 2019, she is officially part of the Breakfast club and Bombsquad in litefeet. This year she is continuing her training as a dancer and is also starting her career as a Model as well.
