what we talk about when we talk about somatics: a sharing of practices leading into conversation
With Justine Lynch, Antonio Ramos, Shelley Senter and RoseAnne Spradlin

What does the term "somatics" even mean? Can we arrive at consensus around this as an idea, a value, a practice? This event will bring together artists/practitioners of various backgrounds and areas of study to lead the group in experiential practices which will evolve into a collective discussion on the term "somatics" and the impact and resonance of this way of learning and being in the world.

A series of artist-instigated panel discussions, roundtables, performances and/or other formats that engage issues of aesthetics, philosophy and social politics relevant to the dance and performance community.

All Studies Project events are free and open to the public.
