Irondale presents the work of the late performer and choreographer Niles Ford featuring the outstanding Urban Dance Collective. Ford, who passed away in 2012, was hailed as "a dancer of quiet intelligence, understated sweetness and intense focus" - The New York Times. This exciting engagement at Irondale will feature two pieces that personify Ford's political and philosophical nature and will feature the world premiere of Ford's "Time to Love". Tickets are $25 and can be purchased online at www.irondale.org. "Summer of Hate/15 Steps" This work reveals societal beliefs through the eyes of the working class, during the summer following the election of President Obama. It reflects the continual idiosyncratic struggle for individuals and families to make ends meet during a period of economic crisis. "A Time to Love" This collection of vignettes documents the human pursuit for the greater meaning of life.
