Questionable Journeys: A workshop on the relationship between inquiry and practice in the making of performance.

"What can be analyzed in my work, or criticized, are the questions." (John Cage)

In this workshop participants will address questions related to their own choreographic practice while simultaneously being challenged to step outside of their current path of inquiry in order to return to it with fresh artistic perspectives. During the workshop, each participant will develop a short work in progress. Through a process of sharing work, constructive feedback, and group discussion, participants will formulate and revise questions of artistic inquiry to further and deepen their practical investigation.
