Affordable Housing in Midtown and Brooklyn: Now Accepting Applications

The Actors Fund is now accepting applications for affordable housing at The Dorothy Ross Friedman Residences (formerly The Aurora) and Schermerhorn House.

Schermerhorn House is a unique, 217-unit residence for single adults in the heart of downtown Brooklyn. Preferences for 100 studio apartments will be given to eligible individuals from Community Board 2 and the performing arts. Schermerhorn House will also house 2,000 square foot state-of-the-art performance space and multipurpose room. Residents and community arts organizations may use this space for rehearsals, performances, films, and exhibitions, enriching the vibrant and growing Brooklyn arts culture.

The Dorothy Ross Friedman Residences (formerly The Aurora) provides supportive housing to special low-income groups including seniors, working professionals and people living with AIDS. Located at 475 West 57th Street and Tenth Avenue in New York City, it is a 30-story, high rise condominium that was converted into 178 shared residential units of supportive housing.

At the Dorothy Ross Friedman Residences, The Actors Fund provides on-site social services for residents, including information and referral to community resources, entitlement program advocacy, coordination of home care and medical services, outreach, health education and support groups.
