The Playground NYC allows dancers to experience various choreographic styles and ideas, engage with a new community of dancers, and gather resourceful information and inspiration from the array of choreographers involved. In turn, established choreographers are paid for their creative investigations, are given free space to explore new movement with professional dancers, and are provided with the opportunity to establish relationships with new dancers and fellow choreographers.

BIO:

Omri Drumlevich, born and raised near Jerusalem, Israel, attended Jerusalem Academy for Music and Dance High School. He joined Batsheva Ensemble in 2010 and was invited to dance with The Batsheva Dance Company between 2012-2017. As a dancer in the company, he produced and created for the annual "Batsheva Dancers Create" Projects. Omri is a certified Gaga teacher and since 2012 he has been teaching Gaga and repertoire by Ohad Naharin and Sharon Eyal internationally. In 2017 The Israel Institute invited Omri to be an Israeli Visiting Artist - Junior Lecturer in Dance at Princeton University. At Princeton he created and performed his solo FAR in support of the Lewis Center for the Arts. Omri has shown his work in venues such as the Tel Aviv Museum of Modern Art, Suzanne Dellal, Tel Aviv City Hall, The Lewis Center for the Arts and many others. Omri is currently based in NYC.
