Limited scholarships for NDI Teaching Artist Training will be offered through audition.

NDI Teaching Artist Training is a two-week immersion in National Dance Institute's renowned teaching techniques. Led by NDI's Associate Artistic Director Tracy Straus and a team of Master Teaching Artists, the training takes place in residence at one of NDI's partner schools, giving participants practical experience teaching New York City public school children. Each year, professional artists and educators from around the globe participate in the training and emerge from this transformative experience with an advanced set of teaching tools and a deepened understanding of the power of the arts in education.

NDI Teaching Artist Training includes daily teaching assignments, choreography workshops, stimulating group discussions, and presentations from leaders in education.

Successful completion of NDI Teaching Artist Training is a prerequisite for employment with National Dance Institute.
