Purple Threads Ensemble in collaboration with guest choreographer Jessica Taylor of DAMAGEDANCE are seeking 9 strong dancers with contemporary backgrounds who have a basic understanding of poetic language. We are developing an original, collaborative work that integrates dance and text into a seamless storyline. Partnering will be involved. This ensemble-based workshop that will explore existing text and scenes through movement and culminate in a final showing for a selected feedback panel.

We welcome dancers with versatile backgrounds, who are interested in working on long term projects and bring a generous & curious attitude towards creating new works.

Must be available for the following dates/times:

Saturdays 1-5pm: Aug 2nd - Aug 9th

Thursdays 6-9pm: Aug 14th & Aug 28th

Saturday 1-5pm: Aug 30th (Panel Feedback Session/Final Showing)

Background on the project:

Originally produced as One-Act play at the 2012 Kitchen Riots Festival, this marks the 3rd in a series of development workshops for 'Call Me She.'

This collaboration between director Danielle Velkoff, writer Jen Browne, and choreographer Jess Taylor of DAMAGEDANCE seeks to integrate dance, text, music and technical elements into a seamless storyline. The six week, ensemble-based workshop sets out to explore existing text and scenes through movement and will culminate in a final showing for a selected feedback panel. Our goal is to explore concepts of Identity and the flexibility of the human mind.
