Project Trans(m)it, an intercontinental dance collaboration and research project, invites applicants for our documentary internship opening, slated to begin in January 2016. We are currently seeking an organized, self-motivated and tech-savvy individual to lead the editing and compilation of our rehearsal footage. Responsibilities for the internship include:

- Accessing our rehearsal and meeting footage via Google Drive
- Sorting, editing and organizing this footage into appropriate promotional videos and components for residency/grant applications.
- Filming any meetings and live showings in 2016, including but not limited to Philadelphia and New York. Filming live rehearsals would also be welcomed in any of our locations.

This position will involve close communication with our team, however most of the internship will take place from a home computer (we are currently located in England, New Jersey/New York and Philadelphia). The videographer will work on their own time, keeping track of a number of deadlines for material from January-August 2016. An excellent opportunity for students interested in earning off-campus credit, or to expand their professional portfolio.
