nathantrice/RITUALS dance theater is looking for female young professional dancers seeking professional experience to perform in the 2018 season of the Recognizing Women Project.

The Recognizing Women Project is an annual research and performance initiative that creates theatrical dance addressing the unique experiences and contributions of women globally. From October 2017 to March 2018, Nathan Trice and project managers will bring local high school, young professional, and professional female dancers together with students in local universities' humanities and social science departments. They will work as a collaborative research team to develop an interdisciplinary understanding of the project's focus and create dance theater inspired by that understanding.

The RWP's 2018 season will develop and present work that addresses the question:

"what is female self-objectification?"

The mission of the RWP is to function as an artistic/educational platform where women across cultures, generations, and geographies can engage in a dynamic inquiry regarding what concerns them, and to energize collaborative activism around those concerns.

Dancers of Color are strongly encouraged to audition!
