Internship Description:

This internship will offer hands-on experience in arts administration, marketing, social media, and environmental activism. Interns will have the unique opportunity to aid in the launching of Artichoke Dance Company's brand-new Artichoke Ambassadors program, an educational training program that aligns environmentally conscious art-making with climate and environmental justice action at collective and individual levels. The launch of this program will require diligent planning, administration, and marketing that will give the intern extraordinary professional experience in a variety of sectors. Aside from this project, the intern will have opportunities to lead relevant research projects, create social media content and execute campaigns, support community outreach initiatives, and aid in administrative duties.

The ideal candidate will have relevant experience and interest in arts administration, marketing, entrepreneurship, and/or business administration. This internship can be done remotely and interns design their own schedules. This internship requires a minimum commitment of 5-7 hours per week for a minimum three month period.
