And You, Who Do You Bring? is a transdisciplinary laboratory-performance combining theater, dance, and music. This project is a unique experience of gathering, collective creation, and expression—an artistic celebration of identity and memory, of the body and imagination, of exchange and transformation. We begin with a question:

- What do you carry within you?

This workshop and performance will be directed and choreographed by Alicia Soto, in collaboration with and assisted by Valerie Green, Artistic Director of Dance Entropy/Green Space as part of Green Space's TAKE ROOT Series.

Alicia Soto – Artist, Researcher, and Pedagogue

With 30 years of experience as a stage director and choreographer, she has created over 30 performances blending dance, theater, and technology. Her transdisciplinary approach has earned her Max Awards, standing out for her originality and the combination of dramaturgy, multimedia, and technology. She has presented her works in 11 countries and also combines her creative work with teaching and advising, fostering the connection of dance with diverse audiences.

OPEN TO: Anyone aged 18 and up—no age limit—regardless of artistic background. Whether you're a dancer, actor, musician, performer, playwright, or simply curious, this space welcomes anyone eager to explore and share their most intimate, creative self.
