Using the Chinese 5 Element Theory and other cognitive principles we will explore individually and collectively the correlation between the organs, senses, emotions, and the propriety of the material space that surrounds us. This practice implements the development of performative languages for improvisation and composition as it bridges physical, emotional, energetical and intellect awareness. All people involved in performance are welcomed. COREMOTION is a movement and performing practice developed over thirty years of research by Daria Fain. It is rooted in Asian philosophy of the body.
