Dancesanity Stars is a fresh and vibrant blend of youth performances as well as professional. This concert showcases the industries top choreographers, performers and budding artists like no other! Join us for a night of entertainment and fun!

Over the last ten years, Sol Dance Center has become the most diverse dance studio in Astoria, and has not only managed to survive the turnover of shops on Steinway Street but has doubled in size since they opened in 2009. The studio, which was founded upon the Latin and Classical roots of owner, Karla Choko, now offers over 10 styles of dance for children and adults including Belly Dance, Heels, Hip-Hop, Flow Arts as well as private lessons, wedding choreography and space rentals. To celebrate their success, the team at Sol Dance Center is hosting a special version of their yearly showcase on June 22, 2019 at the 800-seat Tony Bennett Concert Hall at the Frank Sinatra School of the Arts titled "Dancesanity: Creative Consciousness".

In previous years, Dancesanity has been a way to unite everyone at the studio for a night of talent, passion and dedication, as well as a way to collaborate with other local creatives. This year, the show's message will be the importance of spreading light in one's community through healing each of the chakras, all portrayed through movement.

"Dancesanity: Creative Consciousness" will also be giving back to the arts by donating a percentage of the proceeds to the HEART (Healing and Education Through the Arts) Program by the Save The Children Organization.
