"My goal was to create a community where men of all ages and backgrounds could play, create, share, and ultimately come together to speak to Hearts of Men—where men, young and old, brought everything they had and left it on the floor."

- Fredrick Earl Mosley, Founder and Director of Earl Mosley's Diversity of Dance

Fredrick Earl Mosley, together with Dudley Williams, Clifton Brown, Matthew Rushing, and Brian Harlan Brooks, created Hearts of Men as a safe space where men and nonbinary/gender-nonconforming individuals could come together to share life experiences through the power of movement. As the late, great Dudley Williams, a dancer with Martha Graham Dance Company and Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, said about this uplifting program, "I can't explain it, you just have to feel it and see it, but it's extraordinary."

Hearts of Men, in partnership with Ailey Extension, creates a space for participants to build together while forging life-long, healthy, and supportive relationships as a dance community. We highly encourage families and friends to participate together—the program is open to men and nonbinary/gender-nonconforming individuals ages 13 and up of any dance level!
