Lily Gold

PASS: big nether is Lily Gold's newest performance, enacted by herself and longtime collaborator Mary Read.

Still nascent, this work is an exploration of ritual and prayer through movement and song, asking: how can we experience an immaterial reality amidst the traumas of this material world?

PASS (Performing Arts Salon Saturdays) is a curated performance series that takes place at Snug Harbor. The salon's focus is on original works in performing arts (music, dance, theater, and multi-media) in different stages of development. When possible, work is developed in residence at Snug Harbor, which serves as an incubation lab. Each PASS has a pre-performance reception and a post-performance artist talk moderated by the curator. PASS is curated by Melissa West, Vice President of Curation.
