What does consent feel like to you?
 How does play derive from intense curiosity?
 What does it mean to queer a space of dance/art pedagogy?

Join us on Sunday, December 8th, 6-8 pm at Barnard College, Barnard Hall 305 for ProPel: the embodied exploration of Uila Marx's written undergraduate thesis in dance, "Queering Consent Culture Through Contact Improvisation: A Study on Collective Care." This work, produced by a team of femme- and non-binary identified individuals compiles a semester's worth of bodily and scholarly research, culminating in an evening of discussion and live dance and music performance that invites community members of all disciplines to experience, challenge and ask questions about queerness, pleasure and play through the lens of the art-sport form contact improvisation.
