Sunday Salon and Opening Celebration: Nami Yamamoto, Lu Yim, and lisa nevada

Sunday, October 3 | 2-5pm

Tickets: Free and open to the public

Welcoming audiences to CPR for the first in-person, live performances since March 2020, CPR opens its doors for an afternoon of performances, activations, and celebration, featuring works in development by CPR 2021 Artists-in-Residence Nami Yamamoto and Lu Yim, and a welcome ritual led by lisa nevada.

Visitors are welcome to come and go throughout the afternoon, and the program will occur inside CPR and outside on Manhattan Avenue, weather permitting.

Sunday Salon is an extension of CPR's Artist-in-Residence (AiR) Program, and provides a platform for AiRs to share their current practice with the larger CPR and NYC performance community. Sunday Salon may take many forms, including presentations of live work, artist talks, and presentations of research, materials, and ephemera.

Important note regarding Covid-19: The safety of CPR's artists, visitors, and staff is our top priority. In accordance with the NYC mandate, documentation showing proof of full vaccination against Covid-19 (at least 14 days after final dose) will be required to enter CPR. A physical or photo copy of your vaccination card or NYS Excelsior Pass will be acceptable. CPR may also require masks or social distancing, at its sole discretion.
