<https://www.facebook.com/events/160603594373089/?ti=icl> Each 1 Teach One Dance Series has always held as its core mission to unify the community through dance and education. Over the course of the last few years as events involving excessive use of police force have come to light over social media with alarming frequency, we decided we could no longer remain silent and it was time to take a stand. Hip-hop as a culture was created by African-Americans and Latinos, so the effects of these events are keenly felt within our communities.

These workshops to be held on September 3rd, 2016 are meant to bring unity and light amongst each other while providing a safe space for dancers to come together and engage with each other through their love for dance. We endeavor to create discourse between instructor and students about social-political affairs that effect everyone in our community while still having fun doing what we love. We want to raise awareness for the #BlackLivesMatter campaign and its TRUE mission and spread positivity through our art form.

We are NOT anti-police; we are pro-community engagement and civil discourse among all parties. We feel that it is imperative for us as a dance community, now, more than ever, to come together and show our support for one another, across racial, ethnic, and political lines. [Christina M. Pagan, Author, PR]
