Last week, we approached the final stretch of New York City budget season with the release of the Mayor's Executive Budget, Fiscal Year 2015. The Executive Budget allocates $148 million to the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs, which represents an approximately $.5 million decrease from preliminary financial plans due to technical adjustments (Visit the DCLA website for details). The Executive Budget also invests in New York City children with a $23 million allocation to arts education in the public schools. As City leadership works toward enacting a budget for the year ahead, please follow news on DanceNYC.org and join us in making the case for public support of dance and dance education.
