Dance. Culture. Resilience.
(POC only session)

1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m., Studio U, Capacity: 100

Dance Culture Resilience is a skills-sharing creative strategy session focused on the way in which POC dance makers are thriving and building self-determined spaces and practices to further their wellness, artwork, and communities. This session is offered to self-identified People of Color (POC) and seeks to serve as a safer space for Black, Brown, and other POC folks to organize, share and celebrate strategies and tools for solidarity. Participants should come prepared to listen and share. Please bring brochures, resources, recipes for resilience, and business cards. There will be a swap table set up to exchange tools and resources. Let's build!

Facilitated by:

- Ebony Noelle Golden, Founder and CEO, Betty's Daughter Arts Collaborative

Anti-Racism is Led by People of Color: So What Does My White Ally-ship Look Like?

1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m., Studio H, Capacity: 100

Racism separates us, and community brings us back together. This session will hold space for white identified people to share experience, questions, and resources regarding what kinds of ally-ship, activism, and organizing they are already engaged in. While learning from each other, we will brainstorm ways to continue to strive for ally-ship, and compassionately examine the difference between intention and impact as it plays out in anti-racist organizing. While this session will focus on white experience, it is open to anyone. Facilitators all come from the training of The People's Institute for Survival and Beyond and use their principles as the foundation for our anti-racist organizing.

Featured Participants:

- Jen Abrams, Member of ACRE and Breaking White Silence
- EmmaGrace Skove-Epes, Member of ACRE and Breaking White Silence

Session still in formation

Decolonizing Dance: A Long Table

2:15 p.m. to 3:45 p.m., Studio U, Capacity: 100

How has colonization manifested in dance training, making, presenting, critiquing, documenting, and theorizing? Who are the colonizers and the colonized? What initiatives could be launched to decolonize these sites of power imbalance?

This session will take the form of a Long Table discussion. A Long Table - conceived by Lois Weaver of the lesbian theater duo Split Britches - is a physical space and a non-hierarchical process for people gathering in conversation on topics of communal concern. It allows for an abundant free-flow of ideas, opinions, information, and energy. A curated core group of table guests set the table with food for thought. These guests are not the typical panel of experts, will make no formal presentations, nor will there be a Q&A. They are guests - and so are you, as you sit and listen in. These core participants open the conversation with initial thoughts. They model how to approach the table by first introducing themselves (name, pronouns, and brief identification or affiliation). Each Long Table is set up with chairs for this core group plus at least a few empty chairs. At any point, if you have a thought or questions to share, feel free to take a seat at the table and wait for an opening to speak.

For more resources and information on what a Long Table is, check out these resources: What is a Long Table and Long Table Etiquette.

Dance and Technology

Controlling Systems Through Wearable Soft Circuitry and Movement with Keira Heu-Jwyn Chang

Studio V, open 10:00 a.m. to 5:45 p.m

Gibney Dance's new spaces at 280 Broadway are equipped with groundbreaking technologies made accessible through their Digital Technology Initiative. In this room, participants can play with inexpensive coin-sized sensors sewn into garments and will explore how to use position, acceleration, light exposure, and touch input to control sound elements and video. Participants can also explore human computer interaction, generating projections that respond to the movement of the body with the use of a Kinect camera. The room is in partnership with the Emerging Movement Council (an Inter-University Collaborative).

Featured Collaborators:

- Curated by Scott Shaw, Creative Services and Digital Technology Manager, Gibney Dance
- Produced by Paul Galando, Chair, Emerging Movement Council and Chihiro Shimizu, Director, Emerging Movement Council
- Technology Presented by Keira Heu-Jwyn Chang, Digital Technology Initiative Advisory Committee Member

Gibney Dance's Digital Technology Initiative seeks to empower every artist within its facilities to create and disseminate high-quality digital content by providing ready access to services, hardware, and software.
